About Steven Tybor

Steve Tybor of Buffalo, N.Y. is one of the co-founders of Eight Days of Hope, a Christian, non-profit organization that provides disaster relief, rapid response and safe houses to those in need. Tybor spent more than 30 years in the building-material industry, most recently serving as a vice president and business manager with ProVia before leaving the business world to become the CEO/President of Eight Days of Hope in 2017.

Tybor also serves on the board of directors for the Bigger Than Ball Foundation and the Branches Worldwide global leadership organization. He also has a passion for Christian Contemporary Music, and has been a volunteer leader at the Kingdom Bound Christian Music Festival in upstate New York for 25 years.

He and his wife of 34 years, Charmaine, have five children, Stephen, Zachary, Hannah, Elise and Emma. The two of them partner with Global Outreach as full-time missionaries.

About The Norwood L. Jones Convocation Series

Steven Tybor's lecture is made possible through the Norwood L. Jones Convocation Fund established in 1973 by Mr. and Mrs. Norwood L. Jones and their daughters, Carolyn J. Fletcher and Anne J. Mills. The fund enables Ottawa University to invite distinguished individuals to campus to stimulate and inspire students in their religious life and involvements.

About the Fredrikson Center for Faith and Church Vitality

The Fredrikson Center at Ottawa University supports all student ministries on The College campus and expands their reach and quality. The Center also acts as a gathering place in which theologians, church leaders, faculty members, and pastors come together to dialogue, study, conduct research, provide and receive consultation, and collaborate to advance the life and vitality of the church. The Center works with seminaries and other important institutions in this activity and will ultimately become a catalyst for positive change in an area where the need is great.
